A WORD OF ENCOURAGEMENT .- The Virginia Patron has a good deal better memory than some other journals in Virginia. In off. We shall soon have an illustration in the following peragraph it recalls a fact this State of the futility and foolishness of which speaks louder, than a thousand per- making issues merely for the promotion of sonal organs could. We thank the Patron for its kind words: "The stand taken by the Dispatch on the Virginia side of the public-debt question has elicited unfriendly comment from rival journals. The attacks are unjust; for when more than a year ago the Virginia Patron assailed the officials of the State for perverting the school fund to the payment of interest on the public debt the Dispatch copied the article, and declared that not even Governor Kemper, with all his elo-quence, could stand before the people on ing for 'good Conservatives to stand from under.' The warning was not heeded, nor did one of the journals which now arraign the Dispatch say a word in condemnation of this criminal perversion of the public-

True as preaching. The Dispatch is not a new convert to the cause of public schools. Its record is unassailable on that as on every other question.

The Portsmouth Enterprise predicts that MAHONE will get the largest vote on the first ballot in the Convention! The Enterprise is evidently in the dark. The night of the day on which its article was written Portsmouth sent 17 delegates to the Convention, of which only 5 are for MAHONE!

P. S. Only 2.

The candidate for Governor who has inaugurated the most objectionable system of electioneering ever known in Virginia has reached the end of his game. He would as well retire. There is no bottom left him. The work may be finished without him: This is General MARONE.

The annexation of Texas and a large slice of Mexico, and 54 40 or fight, are facts in history never to be forgotten. [For the Dispatch.] How is the Public Debt to be "Readjusted?"

The public wishes to know from General Mahone what is his plan for "readjusting the public debt. Every man in the Com-monwealth is in favor of "readjusting," if by "readjusting" is meant putting the debt upon a basis upon which we can pay it off with the smallest inconvenience to ourselves. But no one seems to have any plan for "readjustment." Let us hear what the General purposes. Let us hear something practical, or we shall think he is only clamoring to the ear to deceive the hope. A PUBLIC-DEBT MAN.

Mahone on the State Debt. We have looked upon the letters of General Mahone regarding convict labor and the public schools as bieces of demagoguery There is nothing live in either, and there is no question about either. There are not enough people in the State who would abolish the public schools to form a regiment, and convict labor in competition with honest labor is not a question at issue among the people, and if it were it would be easily disposed of to the satisfaction of all without much discussion. General Mahone's letter meets a living fssue, and its sentiments will meet with approbation. The General simply opposes increased taxation and favors a readjustment and compromise of the debt. This is the position all men must take who would not have the Commonwealth repudiate. By failing to meet her obligations, and making no provision therefor, Virginia is practically repudiating. Should matters go along for a few years more as at present repudiation is inevitable. mise is much more honorable than broken pledges. Let us do our utmost to pay the nothing more, nothing less. The Governor, however, will have but little to do with the State debt. That is a question to be settled by the Legislature, and is a matter to be considered in the legislative canvass. As this question is referred to elsewhere this morning we shall not discuss it further. We will add, however, that we are glad to see General Mahone on the right track once. The other aspirants for gubernatorial honors should speak out, and we feel convinced that all, if they give the subject proper consideration, will stand upon the same platform on the debt question with General Mahone.
